

How to Become a Registered Nurse

Table of Contents

How important is it for a nurse to fit in?.....	3
What if they struggle or never fit in?	3
References.....	4

How important is it for a nurse to fit in?

Nursing is a progressive and palliative field for starting as carrier. Students must understand that in this field they have to work for a lot of time and this field the patients require most of their care and time (Aston and Strouther, 2012). But as a nurse it can be very much worthy because they have the power to save any person's life and make their life full of happiness. Therefore for a nursing student, one should be a good communicator so that she can communicate with the patient to understand his actual problem. Along with this a nursing student has to communicate with the doctors and with the patient's family therefore she must know the actual way of communication. The nursing student should be emotionally strong as the student have to face the diseased people constantly(Aust, 2015). The student should be sympatric with the patient as she has to feel one patient's emotion. Nursing student must have patience so that she can handle the entire situation. A nurse should pay attention on the simplest and as well as tiniest details as she is one who is answerable to the doctor as well as the patient. Therefore it is very clear that one nursing student must have these qualities to become a registered nurse. Caring approach should be achieved in context of psychological, spiritual support and if it is considered to be highly valued for patients and families.

What if they struggle or never fit in?

Being a nurse it requires one's full time and dedication. They have to work with various types of people therefore she should have the skills of interactions and a great patience to fit in this field. Becoming a nurse is not an easy task. A nursing job is considered as a hard task but it requires one's full dedication, stamina and strength to relieve patient's illness (O'Neill, 2012). Registered nurses should be more specialized and excellent in their working area and more reliable and dependable in their duties. Some of them may be managers, consultants, or educators. As we all know there is always some headache in case of every job. However, a nursing student may face some issues regarding their patients, patient's relative, and their colleagues in their working field (Pirrie, 2013). Therefore if she is not capable to handle this type of pressure or hardship in her life it becomes really very tough to survive in this field. At the end if she wants to become a registered nurse she has to overcome all this obstacles or this will be very tough for her carrier.

References

Aston, Liz, and Lesley Strouther. The Student Nurse Handbook. Maidenhead: McGraw-Hill Education, 2012. Print.

Aust, M. P. 'Becoming Nursey'. Critical Care Nurse 35.1 (2015): 89-89. Web.

O'Neill, Desmond. Ageing And Caring. Dublin: Orpen, 2012. Print.

Pirrie, Mel. 'Nurse To Patient And Back Again'. Mental Health Practice 17.1 (2013): 11-11. Web.